HATHEWAY HEIRLOOMS.

Priceless Collection Will be Hartford Athenaeum—Now on Exhibition.

Priceless and invaluable is the collection of china, garnitures, Lowestoft, porcelainous stone and Staffordshire ware which was willed to the Wadsworth Athenaeum by Miss Louise E. Hatheway and which was placed on exhibition this week. Miss Hatheway died Dec. 9, 1910, in Suffield, where the Hatheway family had made its home for many years and where the family has been prominent.

The collection to which the Athenaeum fell heir has been handed down from one member of the family to the other for several generations. The original owners of the articles, Nancy Diggins Hatheway and Asahel Hatheway, parents of Louise E. Hatheway, were wealthy residents of Suffield and were well liked throughout the northern section of Hartford county, where they were best known. The daughter, Louise, inherited many of her mother's traits of character, the kind which Harriet Beecher Stowe took great delight in depicting in her works.
